Clarify the page’s scope and make role- and seniority-focused recommendations explicit where the source supports them (e.g., AE and executive strategic hires). Improve the introductory guidance so readers can more quickly tell which firms in the list are best for enterprise/early-stage FinTech, executive placements, or rapid volume hiring. Flag several target queries (city-specific searches, infrastructure/data center specialization, and offer-equivalence guidance) as not directly supported by the source so callers know these remain uncovered.

Fidelity concerns — review this draft

The draft is retained for inspection and export. This automated assessment is advisory; review the source before using the changes.

b000017 · unsupported · Unsubstantiated expansion

The added examples (founding/volume sales teams, VP/CRO retained searches, rapid contingent searches for AEs) introduce specific hire types and uses for the list that are not stated or supported anywhere in this chunk.

Source references: None identified by the reviewer b000049 · unsupported · Unsubstantiated generalization

The revision shifts from describing Redfish to claiming that many firms on the list support AE/quota-bearing roles, define salary bands, and advise on GTM leadership hires—none of which is supported in this chunk’s source text.

Source references: None identified by the reviewer

b000052 · unsupported · Scope expansion beyond source

While the chunk supports Hanover’s network including executive talent and investors, it does not state they connect companies with “other senior commercial hires,” making this an unsupported expansion beyond sales leaders.
